"In 1933, they confiscated the people's gold and the only way they could do that was to actually take away their rights to that personal property. The government would have stolen the gold from the people. It was a $10,000 fine and, I forget how many years in prison, I think it was five years in prison if you didn't turn in your gold bullion, if you had some gold," Hudok said.

"So what they did, they considered it a time of emergency and they beefed up the 1917 War Powers Act and they called it the 1933 War Powers Act and they declared (United States citizens) enemies of their own government, and we still are," he said. "We are considered enemies of our own government. That is crucial to this whole thing because that's what we took to our state. ..."

Hudok said the 1933 War Powers Act has never been rescinded, which he believes means the president can, by policy and not law, in time of war, seize property, organize and control production, seize commodities and communication, regulate the operation of private enterprise, restrict travel and "in a plethora of particular ways, control the lives of all American citizens."

"It's never been rescinded. We are actually in a state of war and we are the enemy of the government and that should upset me. That's why the EPA can use policy that is killing West Virginia," Hudok said. "There is no law that is doing all this stuff, it's policy and the policies go on and on and on."

He said a 1934 $20 bill he possessed had the phrase "Redeemable in lawful money," printed on it, which he said means at that time the United States didn't even have "lawful money." He said today's currency states, "This note is legal tender for all debts public and private," making it a debt note but not actual money.

"One of the things I'm saying is we don't have lawful government, we don't even have lawful money," Hudok said.

He said the group also filed 17 writs of mandamus, or orders from a court to an inferior government official ordering the government official to properly fulfill their official duties or correct an abuse of discretion.

"We had taken the case as far as we could go. As a matter of fact, we couldn't take it any further. Every government entity in the state was named in our final complaint — the Supreme Court justices, the State Police, the Legislature, the governor, the state attorney general, everybody — number one, they are privately incorporated, which we say is wrong. Of our original complaint...we had... 17 writs of mandamus where we requested different things. The counsel for the defendants... had to respond to our complaint," Hudok said. "They only addressed one writ of the 17. When you do that, that's a tacit admission that the others have validity."

Hudok said he is asking for all the aforementioned governmental to resign their positions effective immediately.

"What I wanted them to do and what I am asking them to do right now is resign. Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin, I'm asking for his resignation, I'm asking him to resign. Attorney General Patrick Morrisey, I'm asking him to resign," Hudok said. "The five Supreme Court Justices, I'm asking them to resign."

"The Legislature, I'm acting them to act, since I haven't had any personal dealings with them, I can't because they're defendants. I'm asking them to return our state to its constitution and until they do, I will continue to ask them to do the honorable thing."

Hudok said his hope is to have a government that is run for the people of West Virginia and the United States and follows the "rule of law" of the West Virginia Constitution.

"If you do not have the rule of law, you will have tyranny. That's all we were asking for was the rule of law," Hudok said. "Not private for profit corporate government and to me, this is the most important thing I've ever done in my life. This might be the most important day I've ever had in my life. I'm 65, I've had a life, but our children deserve that we guard the precious liberty we have."

"I won't quit. I can't quit," Hudok said.

$300,000 cash-only bond, set by Wood County Magistrate Robin Waters.

According to a criminal complaint filed in Wood County Magistrate Court, an officer with the West Virginia State Police was contacted in reference to multiple conference calls — made on Sept. 7, 4, 17 and 22 — that were "involving/lead by Thomas Deegan, a self proclaimed Sovereign Citizen."

During the Sept. 14 call, Deegan made "multiple statements to solicit assistance in removing multiple West Virginia Government Leader (sic) from their office in Charleston," the complaint stated.

Deegan then allegedly stated the government would be assumed by members of the Sovereign Citizen movement and that officials would be "charged with crimes such as Treason (sic) and court hearings would be held regarding these charges against Government (sic) officials."

Deegan did not reference at the time what the punishment would be for those "convicted" of treason, but in a later statement said the punishment "would be death," according to the complaint. Also during this conversation, Deegan is alleged to have provided details regarding how sovereign citizens from other states should take over their own state capitol after the West Virginia government was "secured."

Deegan added West Virginia would be the "foot-hold" for the Sovereign Citizen movement to "take back" the United States. He then advised persons interested in participating in this movement to learn the location of the West Virginia State Capitol, the West Virginia State Police Office, the Kanawha County Sheriff's Office and the West Virginia National Guard Facilities in Kanawha County, the complaint states.

He also reportedly said "in order to accommodate lodging for all person (sic) coming for this movement, local hotels would be overtaken and compensated after the Sovereign movement had secured West Virginia."

During directions by Deegan on how to control areas surrounding the Capitol, he reportedly stated "any resistance to combat Law Enforcement (sic) of Military personnel (sic) should be met with Gunfire (sic) if necessary," and that "We are at war" and "the more bodies that come to Charleston the less likely for bloodshed." Deegan added he "does not want to have shots fired but will fire upon opposition forces if necessary."

Later in the conference, Deegan was "asked if the police would support them," and he responded, "If you see the police coming and pulling up in a vehicle, I suggest you shoot them," according to the complaint.

In the lawsuit, Deegan identified himself as "Ambassador (sic) for Heaven Thomas David House of Deegan."

Phillip Hudok of Huttonsville, who is named as a plaintiff in the suit with Deegan and Gene Stalnak, said, in an exclusive interview with The Inter-Mountain, that he believes Deegan was falsely arrested because he believes individuals cannot be arrested by corporations.

"I don't believe they had standing to arrest him (Deegan) and here is why. . . aren't corporations created legal fictions which have no authority over non-contracting real people?" Hudok said. "Thomas Deegan had the right to, and expatriated from corporate citizenship, which we showed in our court filings."

Hudok added that he feels the West Virginia State Police should not have been able to arrest Deegan because they are a "legal fiction" of the state government.

"It is supposed to be government by and for the people but it's really a corporation," Hudok said. "For that reason, he could not be arrested unless a real public servant, not a corporation, not a magistrate of that corporation, instructed the County Sheriff, let's say, if he is not incorporated, to be arrested and that could come from a magistrate, again that would have to be a non-corporation."

The alleged comments made by Deegan during these calls were not made directly to Capitol officials but were reportedly said during private conference calls or interviews.

"I was in on a lot of conference calls, probably less than half though, and they were not with the Capitol," Hudok said. "They were conference calls with different radio talk show hosts or private conferences."

Hudok insisted Deegan was not a dangerous person.

"Many times on those conference calls he said, 'I don't want any blood shed, I don't want anyone to be hurt,'" Hudok said. "He's not a dangerous man any more than I am."

"I just know he didn't want anyone to get hurt, period, anyone," Hudok continued. "He didn't want that and he's not a dangerous man. He's dangerous to a government that's out of control and so am I."

"The Southern Poverty Law Center labeled me an extremist candidate when I was running for U.S. Senate and, I guess, to law-breakers I am extremist because they intend to keep power. They will not give it up, you have to force tyrants to give up power."

"We should be closing on the bonds sometime late November to early December, and hopefully this spring that project can get started again. That's been in the works between 10 and 15 years so that's going to be another huge project."

"As bad as I hate to say, you think the streets are torn up now, they are really going to be torn up then because we are going to be putting a lot of new water lines throughout town," he continued. "Some of these water lines are between 70, 80 and 90 years old so that's something we are going to be upgrading."

Broughton said individuals recently came together in an effort to clean up the Tygart Valley River.

"A couple months ago we had a group of 20-some volunteers come in to clean the river. They took out two to three dump truck loads of garbage, buggies, mattresses, sofas," Broughton said. "This same group is going to come back and help us the last part of this month. We are going to start cleaning some brush on the side of the river banks. We have a great resource in the river here in town that we are going to take advantage of so we want to start cleaning the river banks up, and, hopefully, I would like to see some boat docks and places to fish."

Broughton added the city is in the process of filing for grants that will allow for replacing the Swinging Bridge that connects Wilson Street to South Elkins.

The National Guard Armory is another project Broughton said he hopes to have available to rent for occasions and events soon.

This winter, inmates from Huttonsville Correctional Center will be in the facility washing down walls and painting before a sprinkler system is put in.

The city is also working to increase the number of staffed law enforcement agents on the Elkins Police Department, including three who are supposed to become eligible by week's end.

"We do have three new cadets getting out of the police academy this Friday so we will have three new policemen in town," Broughton said.

The mayor said he hopes to see more than a dozen officers on staff, including a foot patrol officer for the downtown area.

"Next year in the budget, we are going to try to get three more policemen in our budget...," Broughton said. "We want to have 12 policemen, but me personally, I would like to see us get up around 15, get three or four per shift and get one on foot downtown."

A Veteran's Day Parade is planned for next month, on a date to be determined.

"We are going to have the Veteran's Day Parade in November. We will release the date this week," Broughton said. "The Veteran's Day Parade went over really big last year and we've already had the same groups, same bands and a lot of extra bands and groups that want to participate this year."

The city also plans to move up the date when Christmas lights are put up downtown this year.

"We usually try to get Christmas lights up by the middle of November. We are going to try to get Christmas lights up here in the next couple weeks. Polar Express will be running earlier this year and we want to have all of our lights hopefully up and working by then," Broughton said. "That will help businesses to have more Christmas spirit downtown and bring more people downtown."

The mayor said the city's leaf pickup schedule will begin again soon.
